Final Destination 5

By Syaza Nazura Azmi 17, Selangor

I'M NOT MUCH of a movie fan, unless, of course, you're talking about the Harry Potter series. But, somehow, Final Destination 5 caught my attention with its creative and brutal plot. Although I have not seen the previous four films of the series, I enjoyed the fifth installment.

Final Destination 5 is basically about a group of people who cheated death by escaping a suspension-bridge collapse. These 'lucky' survivors later realised the horrible truth: they cannot cheat Death, no matter what they do. They might have escaped their pre-determined end, but Death will eventually get them – one way or another.

Like most people anticipated, this movie contains over the top death scenes. One should expect to see people dying in gruesome, yet somewhat cartoonish ways, as Death gets its due, especially during the part where an ophthalmologist's laser surgery goes horribly wrong.

Some of the scenes were questionable -- even laughable for some -- as they were quite unrealistic. But overall, the plot of this movie was the best among all the films of the series, with better acting and editing. The death scenes might seem comical and illogical for some, but they are certainly full of suspense, creativity and shock.

Fans of the Final Destination series will definitely enjoy this sequel as it delivers what they have been waiting for. New viewers would also like this movie as it is exciting and enjoyable. It is undoubtedly one of the most gruesome movies ever created.
